10. This Abstract, which I now publish, must necessarily be imperfect. I cannot here give references and authorities for my several statements; and I must ① trust to the reader reposing some confidence in my accuracy. No ② doubt errors will have crept in, though I hope I have always been cautious in trusting to good authorities alone. I can here give only the general conclusions at which I have arrived, with a few facts in illustration, but which, I hope, in most cases will ③ be sufficed. No one can feel more sensible than I do of the necessity of hereafter publishing in detail all the facts, with references, on which my conclusions have been grounded; and I hope in a future work to do this. For I am well aware that scarcely a single point is discussed in this volume on which facts cannot be ④ adduced, often apparently leading to conclusions directly opposite to those at which I have arrived. A fair result can be obtained only by fully stating and balancing the facts and arguments on both sides of each question; and this cannot possibly be here done.

11. Some cultures draw a clear line between childhood and adulthood, a line that ① crossed when a person undergoes a rite of passage. By contrast, as Hollindale ② notes, in the contemporary West 'communal and official recognitions of childhood's end are arbitrary and ritualistically barren', although he ③ does leave the option that 'some people move from child to adult in one fell swoop', in the case of traumatic experiences, ④ for example.

15. Stereotypes are one way in which we “define” the world in order to see it. They classify the infinite variety of human beings into a convenient handful of “types” towards whom we learn to act in stereotyped fashion. Life would be a wearing process _____. Stereotypes economize on our mental effort by covering up the blooming, buzzing confusion with big recognizable cut-outs. They save us the “trouble” of finding out what the world is like — they give it its accustomed look.

- ① if we tried to stick to stereotypes
- ② if we learned to act in stereotyped fashion
- ③ if we prejudged people before we ever lay eyes on them
- ④ if we had to start from scratch with every human contact

In the mid to late 1480s, when Leonardo da Vinci was attempting to establish himself as a court artist, he seems to have started on his huge range of drawing that touch on almost all areas of science, and which to this day constitute a significant part of his reputation.

- (A) These drawings are intriguing and fascinating in themselves, and not simply with regard to the potential airworthiness of these machines.
- (B) Besides technical, artistic, and ‘scientific’ drawings there are also various studies from this period which can really only be described as fantastical.
- (C) This applies as much to some of the military equipment as to his numerous designs for flying machines.
- (D) Nevertheless he returned again and again to studies of the flight of birds, the aerodynamics of flying and the construction of wings.
- (E) No doubt the artist was fully aware of the problems that would come with any such undertaking.

Although Cathe did not have PhD students of her own, because she did not hold an academic position while at Haskins, there are many Haskins students who worked closely with her and were influenced by her. During her last, brief hospital stay in late June 2008, she was visited by a group of five current Haskins students and recent PhDs who had never had the opportunity of working with her. Since Cathe’s caregivers were absent from the room at that moment, the other patient in the room asked: “So do you all work for her, too?” One of the group, not missing a beat, answered, “No. We are all her students.”

Human nature has many curious traits, but one of the most curious is _____. No one thinks it a fine thing to have a motor car that is perpetually going out of order: people do not boast that after a long run their car is completely useless for several weeks, or that it is perpetually developing strange troubles which even the most skillful mechanics cannot put right. Yet that is how people feel about their own bodies. To have a body that does its work satisfactorily is felt to be uninteresting and rather plebeian. A delicate digestion is almost indispensable in the equipment of a fine lady. I am aware in myself of the impulses to boast of illness: I have only been ill once, but I like people to know how very ill I was that once, and I feel vexed when I come across other people who have been more nearly dead without dying.

- ① fear of diseases
- ② interests in motor cars
- ③ pride in illness
- ④ phobia of death

In the huge, open lands of the American west, herding cattle is one way to make a living. The image of the cowboy on his horse is a familiar one, but in reality, women also participate in ranch work. This reality can be seen in the rodeo, where cowboys and cowgirls compete in roping young steers, and riding adult bulls. Throwing a rope around a steer is something ranchers must do in order to give the young animals medicine or to mark the steers as their property. _____, riding on the back of a large and angry bull is purely for sport—a brutal and dangerous sport. But that danger does not stop the men and women who love the rodeo.

- ① To take an example
- ② To be brief
- ③ On the other hand
- ④ By the same token
